Look at our Reading Matter. Look at

JACKSON-LINCOLN. ANDREW JACKBON.

was still more remarkable. A prominent dairyman had henored the occasion by send-were almost identical with those of 1839, MALTIN VAN BUREN.

The inauguration of Martin Van Buren or isported; its weight was 1,400 pounds.

the inauguration of Jackson.

house of representatives, inauguration, retirement and death. In the case of the four vice presidents who succeeded their deceased chiefs, the date of their assuming the office is given, as that of their formal ingeneration was of course the same as that of George Washington-Feb. 22, 1732, No. common date in states for popular election. April 6, 1780; April 50, 1780; March 4, 1797;

John Adams-Oct. 19, 1735; Nov. 8, 1796 Feb. 8, 1797; March 4, 1797; March 4, 1891; July 4, 1836. ins Jefferson-April 2, 1743. No election by popular vote in 1800; elected by house Feb. 17, 1801; March 4, 1801; March 4, 1809; July 4, 1836. James Madison-March 16, 1751; Nov. 8

1808; Feb. 8, 1809; March 4, 1809; March 4, 1817; June 28, 1806. James Mouroe-April 28, 1758; Nov. 5, 1816; Feb. 12, 1817; March 4, 1817; March 4, 1831; July 4, 1831.

John Quincy Adams—July 11, 1767. No popular election in 1824; elected by house Feb. 10, 1835; March 4, 1835; March 4, 1829; Feb. 25, 1848.

Andrew Jackson-March 15, 1767; Nov. 4, 1828; Feb. 11, 1839; March 4, 1839; March 4, 1837, June 8, 1843.

 Martin Van Buren—Dec. 5, 1789; Nov. 8,
 1836; Feb. 8, 1837; March 4, 1837; March 4,

841; July 34, 1863. William Henry Harrison—Feb. 9, 1773; Nov. 3, 1840; Feb. 10, 1841; March 4, 1841; April 4, 1841. (Death terminated official life.) John Tyler-March, 1790. Elected, etc.,

6, 1841. March 4, 1845; Jan. 17, 1822. James Knox Polk—Nov. 2, 1746; Nov. 5, 1844; Feb. 19, 1845; March 4, 1845; March 5, with Harrison; took oath as president April

Zachary Taylor-Sept. 24, 1784; Nov. 7, 1848; Feb. 14, 1849; March 5, 1849; died July

Millard Fillmore-Jan. 7, 1800; elected, etc., with Taylor; succeeded July 9, 1850; March 4, 1855; March 6, 1874.

Franklin Pierco-Nov. 25, 1804; Nov. 2, 1872; Feb. 9, 1830; March 4, 1833; March 4, 1877; Oct. 8, 1802.

James Buchanan-April 13, 1791; Nov. 4, 1856; Feb. 11, 1857; March 4, 1857; March 4, Abruham Lincoln-Feb. 13, 1809; Nov. 6, 1950; Feb. 15, 1861; March 4, 1861; Nov. 8, 1864; Feb. 8, 1865; March 4, 1865; diel April

Andrew J luson-Doc. 20, 1808; elected Andrew J thron-Doc. 23, 1803; elected rice provident, took onth as president April 10, 1805; March 4, 1805; July 31, 1875. Ulysses Simpson Grant—April 27, 1822; Nov. 3, 1863; Feb. 10, 1809; March 4, 1869;

March 4, 1877; July 23, 1885. rford Burchard Hayes-Oct. 14, 1823; Nov. 7, 1876; March S, 1877; March 5, 1877;

March 4, 1881; the only living ex-president.

James Abram Garfield—Nov. 19, 1881;
Nov. 2, 1880; Peb. 9, 1881; March 4, 1881.
Diad Sept. 19, 1881.
Chester Allan Arthur—Oct. 5, 1830. Elected with preceding; took oath as prasident Sept. 20, 1881; March 4, 1820; Nov. 18, 1884. Grover Cleveland—March 18, 1837; Nov. 4, 1884; Feb. 11, 1885; March 4, 1885; March

WASHINGTON-JEFFERSON.

On June 21, 1768, New Hampshire ratified the Federal constitution, being the minth state to do so, and on the 2d of July her formal notification of the fact was read in the Confederation congress. By the terms of the constitution the ratification of nine states made it operative; therefore the congress, after long debate, on the 13th of September resolved:

"That the first Wednesday in January next be the day for appointing electors for the governal states which before that date shall have ratified the constitution; that the first Wednesday in February next be the day for the electors to assemble in the respective states to vote for president, and that the first Wednesday in March next be the time and the present seat of congress the place for ing proceedings under the constitu-

Only the first part of this was carried out on the dates designated. George Washing ton received every electoral vote for predtient, and, as far as can be known, every individual vote in the United States. But there was no such unanimity in the choice for vice resident, John Adams receiving little more han a majority of the electoral votes. Owing to the basiness of the reads, and not a little to what now seems criminal neglect, the embers of the first house did not assemble in ufficient numbers to form a quorum until he 6th of April, 1789, and on that day the votes of the electors were opened and count-id. Official information was immediately communicated to Washington and Adams and preparations made for an impressive ina continued triumphal procession.

As they drew near the city of New York it was seen that all the vessels and boats were highly decorated and crowded with speciators, and his progress was accompanied with the music of many bands, the roar of cannon and loud acclamations of the people.

Landing at Murray's wharf he was reesived by the governor, corporation of the [11, George Clinton 7, John James Tredell 2 city, elergy, foreign ministers and the militury and escorted to his residence. On the Johnson 2, and Charles C. Pinckney 1, 30th of April service was held in all the On the 4th of March Mr. Jofferson was enducted by Marshal Webb to the senate Then the vice president, addressing Washing-en, saidt tives of the United States are ready to attend you to take the oath required by the constitu-tion, which will be administered by the chan-cellor of the state of New York."

at the south end of the hall, where Chancellor Livingston, of New York, pronounced the onth, and Washington, holding up his right hand reverently, in a clear, strong voice

"I, George Washington, do solemnly swear ceed in the usual state.

with four or six horses—to the Capitol, precided by the marshal and followed by that open per ceeded by the marshal and followed by the ceeded by the people, exclaimed in a loud voice. "Long live George Washington, president of the United States,"

Washington president of the United States, and entering the followed by the ceeded almost from the convenience, with only moderate state, and entering the povernment, lists uncerseasor coming the civil war, and with graded as the closing of one system of administration may be reparded as the closing of one system of administration of the United States.

The chained in a loud voice, "Long live George

Washington, president of the United States,"

Washington president, the marshal of the District of Columbia, his officers and other efficient in the best your of John Adams administration may be reparded as the closing of one system of administration with the United States.

The procession seend. The crowd in Washington surpassed all previously known, croupt that at the military recover in the the military the more of the united States from the crowd in Washin that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will, to houses and the officials being scated, he de-livered his inauguration speech. Then the new president and the members of both conseq processing to St. Pairs chiles and joined in the prayers which were offered by Dr. Provest, lately ordained bishop of the Protestant Eoiscopel church in New York Protestant Episcopal church in New York nd appointed chaplain of the senate.

It is searcely possible to describe the contrust between this scene and Wnahimston's second inauguration. At the first the young republic exhibited all the display that it ould muster. The second was very quiet. The French revolution and the negotiations with Great Britain, the whicky insurrection on beginning in western. Pennsylvania and the ill fortune that had followed the operations against the Indians had roused a furi-ous party spirit in the congress. On the one charged with a monarchical bias, and the expectation naturally going to the extreme, fought against every form of state ceremony. Mindful of these signs and the hand many public persons were vehemently Minuful of these signs and the necessity being complacent even to the prejudices the people. Washington asked the opinions of his cabinet concerning the forms to be used. Jefferson and Hamilton, who soldom agreed in mything, agreed in advising him that he should take the cuth of office privately at his own house, and that certificate of that fact should be deposited in the state department. Exer and of March, 1821, fell on Sunday, the second in-Rendolph protested, insisting that the erre-mony should be in public, but without any stentations display. At the cabinet meeting the let of March it was decided that the onth should be administered by Judge Cushing of the supreme court of the United States in the senate chamber exactly at noon, and 'that the president shall go without form, atnded by such gentlemen as he shall choose and return without form, except that he be receded by the marshal," the responsibility sing thus largely thrown upon Washington. He rode from his residence to the congress hall in his private crosm colored coach, drawn by six borses, preceded by the mar-

shai, as proposed, and, accompanied by a very senate chamber and in the presence of both houses of congress, bends of the departments, foreign ministers and as many spectators as could find room, he rose and said:

"Fellow Citizens: I am called upon by the votes of my country to execute the functions of its chief magistrate. When the occasion proper for it shall arrive, I shall endeavor to express the high sense I entertain of this distinguished honor and of the confidence which has been reposed in me by the people of the United States of America. Previous to the execution of any official act of the president, the constitution requires an oath of office. This oath I am now about to take in your presence so that if it shall be found during my administration of the government I have in any instance violated, willingly or knowingly, the injunction thereof, I may, besides incurring constitutional punishment, be subject to the unbraiding of all who are now witnesses of this solutine ecremony."

JOHN ADAMS.

It would seem that the young republic exhausted its taste and capacity for escemonial display at the first inauguration, for the conwas almost hadicross. Furthermore, a great deal of the pemp and pageantry of Wa ton's administration, the gilded coach with coat of arms on the panel, the six white horses, the half court dress and all that sort of thing rapidly disappeared. The country ns rapidly growing more democratic. On the 6th of February, 1987, John Ashm acting as vice president, opened and counted the votes which made him president, an-nouncing that there were for him 71, for Thomas Jefferson 62, for Thomas Pinchneylate minister to Great Britain—32, for Aaren Burr 30, Samuel Adams 15, Oliver Elisworth

Johnson 2, and Charles C. Pinckney 1. On the 4th of March Mr. Jefferson was murches of the city at 9 o'clock in the installed as vice president early in the morn-terning and soon after mean the committees ing, and took his seat as president of the seaof congress and heads of departments waited atc. With them iso proceeded to the repre-upon Washington and a grand procession sentatives' ball, attended by the members was formed, the military in advance, the and a large audience of ladies and gentlemen. committees next, then the president in a coach accompanied by his aid-de-camp, Col. Hum-phreya, and his private secretary, Tobias Lear. and Iredell. Soon a loud cheering was heard After them were various civil efficers and rolling along the street announcing the ap-minens. Arriving at Federal hall, they were proach of Washington and the presidentelect. As they entered the hall the audience chamber, at the door of which the president areas and greeted them with enthusiastic was formally received by Vice President choers. Washington, when they had reached Adams, previously imagurated, and con-ducted to his sent. Both houses of congress occupied the senate chamber before bim. as singularly impressive and affecting. After Washington Mr. Adams arose took the oath of office, and at once de "Sir, the senate and house of representa- livered his inaugural. It was noted that when he concluded and Washington left the hall, nearly all the west audience, and even Washington responded: "I am ready to speeced." Then they passed to the open porch the south end of the hall, where the second second in the south end of the hall, where the second second in the south end of the hall, where the second in the

THOMAS JEFFERSON. It is rather curious that a matter so recent and so fully described as the imaguration of Thomas Jefferson should have been the subject of so much discussion. We now know that it was the intention that he should proceive Jefferson. He vacated the chair before asse proceeded to St. Paul's church and Mr. Jefferson and occupied one on the left, administered by the chief justice, and with-

JAMES WADISON. On the 4th of March, 1809, there was a large assemblage to witness the inauguration of James Madison, and some circumstances connected with it attracted attention, among others the fact that Mr. Madison was clad in a plain suit of black, all of which was of American manufacture. He went through the coremonies of the day with a soleme dignity. The officers were scated as before, the vice president on his left, the chief justice on his right, Mr. Jefferson accompanying him to the doer. The second administration of Mr. Madison began with almost exactly the same oseemo

JAMES MONBOUL The inservuration of James Mouroe, on the 4th of Murch, 1817, setrected a very large erowd, especially from Virginia and the border states of the north. The coremonics were substantially the same as before. As the 4th auguration of Mr. Monroe took place the sext day. The hall of the house was passed with members and spectators; the city was crowded with visitors from all parts of the country, and the procession from the White House the Capitol was very long and imposing.

On March 4, 1835, John Quiney Ada was inaugurated as the sixth president of the United States, and with deference to what was supposed to be his taste, the marshal of was supposed to be his taste, the marshal of the District of Columbia, the officials and citi-zens of Washington exerted themselves to make the ceremonial extremely imposing. A very large body of citimes were in attend-addition to this, on the brow of the hill, not far from the north end of the Capitol, commanding both the approach and the broad plateau to the east front, was stationed a plateau to the east front, was stationed a commission and in congress were concluded on that day. As the public ance, and the reporters of the day did not fail was dressed in a plain suit of black, wholly of American manufacture. After delivering his inaugural, he took the oath, receiving the as inaugura, no took as oan, recoving the congratulations of a large number of friends, and immediately proceeded to his room and wrote the message sending the names of his cabinet to the senate. And with him ended a great deal of the peculiar old coronnal connected with the president, as with him ended strictly speciment to formative or.

ended, strictly speaking, the formative, or, as it is sometimes called, revolutionary period of American history. The administration of Andrew Jackson was an epoch in American history. There never had been in Washington anything like so large a crowd as that which was present at Gen. Jackson delivered his inaugural and took the eath of office at the east front of the Capitol. The procession both to and from the Capitol was the longest ever seen down to that time in Washington. From there the a strange historic group was accidentally formed. On one side was Senator Douglas, late Mr. Lincoln's chief rival for the presia strangeformed. On one side was real.

Into Mr. Lincoln's chief rival for the presilate Mr. Lincoln's chief rival for the presidency, holding Mr. Lincoln's hat. On the other side stood Chief Justico Taney, nathor of the Dred Scott decision, and close to the latter freadent Buchanan. To the front and real stood Abraham Lincoln, president sonter stood Abraham Lincoln, president conter stood Abraham Lincoln, president sonter stood Abraham president went to the White House, where all the doors were open and no one was refused admittance. Orange punch by barreis was made, and in serving it pails would be up-set, glasses broken and painful confusion caused. The opposition writers declared that tules of punch were carried from the lower story into the garden to lead off the crowd from the room, and that men with boots heavy with much stood on the damask satin covered chairs in their engerness to see the president. At a subsequent levee the scene ing Gen. Jackson an enormous cheese, the largest that could be manufactured and The choese was cut up and distributed to the crowd, who struggled for it, dropped it, trod mies, but friends-we must not be enemiesthough passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection," etc., the it into the carpets and thereby ruined them. The condition of the White House is described by a writer of the day as that of a republican palace which had just passed through an obstimate and protracted siego and been sucked by the victorious enemy. The events of Jackson's first administration, the furious contest of 1832, the nullification excitoment of the next winter and the proceedings of that winter in congress, made the beginning of his second administration as exciting and interesting as the first. Not quite so large a crowd was in attendance and the ceremonics numbed by Gen. Scott, thundered its salute, scorted them to the White House, the 4th of March, 1857, was a comparatively the six of March, 1851, was a comparatvely turns affair, but he, like all subsequent presi-dents, followed the example of Jackson in speaking from the east front of the Capital. The eath of office was alministered by Chief Justice Taney.

WILLIAM HENRY BARRISON. The political revolution of 1840, which noks with 1800 and 1802 as the hardest fought contest before the civil war, resulted in the election of Gen. William Henry Harrison, which excited so much enthusiasm among his supporters that the crowd on the 4th of March, 1841, was very large and the procession and ceremonies very imposing.

Officially it was like the preceding. JAMES KNOX POLK.
The inauguration of James Knox Polk, cleventh president of the United States, on March 4, 1845, was not remarkable in any way. The day was rainy, but the crowd was ZACHARY TAYLOR. On the 5th of March, 1849 (for the 4th fell on Sunday), Zachary, Taylor was inaugurated without special incident, except that the civic display and procession was very large and admirably arranged. In the presence of at least 20,000 people he delivered his inaugural and took the oath of office. PRANKLIN PIERCE.

It is not within the province of this article to set forth the porteutous events just preceding the inauguration of Abraham Linder divided into eight divisions followed. Desp coln; the florce four sided campaign of 1862; the long winter of anxiety and gloom; the successive rotirement of congressmen as seven states seconded; the rumers of intended assus-sination and the secret night journey of Mr. and congress adjourned.

The second inauguration of Mr. Jefferson differed little from the first.

Lincoln to Washington. Nevertheless, these things must be borne in mind by one who would understand the second of the control of the ration. Gen. Winfield Scott, then lieuter general of the United States army, and in command at Washington, was firmly per-suaded that a riot was planned for inauguration day, during which an attempt was to be made to assessmate Mr. Lincoln. He there-fore organized the militin of the District and disposed of his available force of regulars an On the 4th of March, 1861, the retiring president, Buchanan, and Mr. Lincoln rode together to the Capital, the president driving to Willard's hotel for the president-slort. They rode between double files of a squadron of District of Columbia cavalry. In front of them merched a company of suppers and miners, and bekind them came the infantry and riflemen of the district. On the roofs of all the highest houses along Pennsylvania avanne were placed squade of riflemen from the regular army with orders to watch the windows on the opposite side and fire upon them in ence any attempt should be made to fire from those windows upon the presidential carriage. A small force of regular cavul-ry, the only one that could be obtained, was detailed in squade to guard the street creasings on Pennsylvania avenue, each squad resiring by side streets as the presidential carriage passed and taking up its position carriage passed and taking up as postero about, so that each street crossing was ther

When the presidential carriage reached the onst front, the two occupants passed arm in arm to the semite chamber, already densely packed with officers and civilians, where the occupancy of swearing in the vice president was soon performed. Then the two, surrounded by the justices of the supreme court, the senate committee of arrangements, the outgoing president and the family of the president-elect, the chief justice in his robes, the clerk of the court with a Bible, took their places on the front of the platform at the east portice. Before them were perhaps 20,-000 people, all in deep silence and every face serious, many apparently in deep gloom. The construction of the great dome of the Capitol was in progress, and in front of the president-elect stood the bronze statue of Liberty. Just before the ceremonies began American history. When the loud and pro-lenged cheering had subsided, Senutor Eaker briefly introduced Mr. Lincoln, and stepping forward the president-elect, in a firm, clear voice, every word being heard by every one of the audience, rend that remarkable inquigural. When he pronounced the closing words, "I not loth to close—we are not enpeople broke into a loud and prolonged cheer. Chief Justice Taney arose and took up his Bible, and Mr. Lincoln, pronounced

"I, Abraham Lincoln, do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will to the best of my ability preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States." As the last word died away the battery, com-Mr. Buchanan and President Lincoln re-turned to their carriage and the military

Four years later there was a crowd beyond all previous experience of Washington, and a military display composed only of soldiers who happened to be there at the time; but even the temperary surplus of the army at that time was greater than the whole regular army before the war. The second inaugural address of President Lincoln was not so closely scanned as his first, for the policy of the administration was already determined. It was far more poetic and even more pathe-tic than the first. Many sentences are now familiar as household words, and the closing paragraph has become an American classic,

"With malice toward none and charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borns the battle and for his widow and orphans; to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and a lasting peace among our-selves and with all nations." The national salute was then fired and Mr. Lincoln, in a barouchs with Senator Foster, of the committee of arrangements, was escorted by the military to the White House. On this occasion and the next Chief Justice Chase administered the oath of office.

U. S. GRANT. In like manner the inauguration of Franklin plerce, on the 4th of March, 1833, was without special incident, though the crowd was large and the procession a fine one.

On Wednesday, March 4, 1857, the president-elect, James Buchanan, was the center of a procession which reached almost from the White Heap to the carifol. The closing of White Heap to the carifol. The closing of The inauguration of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant divided into eight divisions followed. Despite the rain, the entire space before the east front of the Capitel was filled with people. On the platform were the usual officials.

After the formal ceremonies in the senate and the swearing in of the vice president, the platform at the east front. The long procesion extended almost entirely around the Capitol and far up the adjacent street, there not being room enough to approach the east front.

Gen. Grant then took the cuth of office and to the notes in his hand, and then Chief read his mangural, but in so low a voice that Justice Waite administered the eath for it was only beard by those nearest to him. and frequently interrupted by prolonged cheers from the crowd.

cosers from the erows.

It was unanimously agreed by the military authorities, officials and political friends of Gen. Grant, that his second inauguration, March 4, 1873, should be even more impressive than the first-far more impressive than that of any preceding president; but the day was singularly unpropitious and the suffer-ing was simply intense. The attendance of military, both regular and volunteer, was very large, and Pennsylvania avenue was packed on both sides, as before, with an immense crowd. All the proceedings were directed by the signal corps officers, who were stationed on all the commanding buildings, even upon the Capitol. But from dawn till dark the wind blew from the northwest with a violence amounting to a gale. The cadets from West Point and from the naval academy at Annapolis were specially commis-erated, as they had not prepared for such extreme weather. Their suffering was very great, and including them, the rest of the military and the spectators, it is estimated that many scores of deaths were caused by exposure on that day. The ceremonies were exposure on that day. The ceremonies were almost identical with those of four years before. The oath of office was administered by the new chief justice, Morrison R. Waite.

B. B. BAYES.

Who was a distributed by the president arrives. He holds a levee, but gets away soom after 12. The crowd dances until the small hours.

A week later Washington resumes its 4th of March fell upon a Sunday, the public ceremonies took place upon the 5th. They were marked, except in the military display by a severe simplicity amounting to plain-ness. The foreign diplomatic corps alone ap-peared in uniforms and decerations. Except for a few soldiers' uniforms, there was not a badge or decoration about any of the Americans taking part. The crowd was not so large as at the first inauguration of President Grant. He and Senator Morrill, chairman of the senate committee of arrange president-elect, and after the officers, as be fore. Before the president's carriage were the Washington light guards and a battery of light artillery; behind them regulars, militia and volunteers as before. At least 30,000 people were in front of the Capitol. Vice President Wheeler was swern in in the senate, as before. The officials, their ladies and ladies of the diplomatic corps, supreme court inauguration, March 4, 1881, was inclement. Rain in the morning, sleet and snow as the day advanced and mod everywhere and all day cast a gloom over the people. But the pageant was not wholly spoiled and the crowd was large. The procession moved at half past 10, Gen. W. T. Sherman, with a brilliant staff, leading the way. After him came the military under Gen. Ayres, then the incoming and outgoing presidents in a four horse barouche, with gorgeously uniformed envalry before and behind, and after them the usua array of militia and civic societies. The usual civilians and cilicials occupied the plat-form at the cost front of the Capitol. The inaugural address was read with remerbable force and effect and excited much emotion among the people. The inaugural ball was held in the National museum, one of the handsomest buildings in the country, designed in the form of a Greek cross, and was the first hall of the kind to attract universal attention.

Five thousand holders of tickets were admitted. President Garfield, in full evening costume, received with dignity, supported by Mesera. Evarts, Schurz, Maynard, Breckinridge, Hasen, Chief Justice Waite and others The brilliancy of dress displayed attracted universal attention.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

The inauguration of Grover Cloveland sur passed all previous ones. For a week before March 4 the two Washington depots were crowded with people night and day.

It is estimated that 250,000 persons from other places were present. How to accom-modate them had been one of the problems for the inauguration committee, who ap-pointed several hundred men to make a canvass of the householders who had room to spare and would be willing to receive one or more of the tourists.

In spite of the precautions all the available space was occupied two days before the inauguration, and the thousands who arrived on the 2d and 3d of March were left to shift for themselves. How they shifted is still matter of amusement to the Washingtonians They slept in hallways and cellers and in the public parks.

The morning of the inauguration was warm, fragrant and spring like. The streets were througed as early as 6 o'clock, and soon was heard the tramp of regiments marching to the place of formation. By 10 o'clock there were three hundred thousand people lining Pennsylvania avenue. At half past 11 a great shout, that swelled into a deafening roar from one end of the avenue to the other, announced that the procession and started. Pennsyl vania avenue is the widest thoroughfare in the world. It is paved with asphalt (as are all the streets of Washington) and is unequaled for a procession. Down this avenue swept the noblest procession seen in the capital since the grand review of the army in 1803.

The procession is led by a recommendation of the same and the streets of the streets of carriage has passed come the troops, in every kind of uniform. This procession is six hours passing a given point, but the enthusiase

Meanwhile the presidential party has reached the platform at the eastern end of the Capitol. The platform is 100 feet wide, the largest ever built for the purpose. In front of the Capitol, banked in a solid me stood 250,000 people.

The president delivered his inaugural address in a clear, resonant voice, from mem-ory, making only an occasional reference to the notes in his hand, and then Chief office. Cleveland said: "I swear," then paused and kissed the Bible—a small, leather bound, well worn volume, which had been given to him by his mother when be

At the Washington monument was give that evening the greatest display of fireworks ever mode in America.

Then the crowd makes a rush for the great pension office building, where the inauguration ball is to be held. One hundred thousand people surround the building and watch the fortunate ten thousand who are able to enter.

The ball room is the largest ever used for a presidential fete. There is a waxed floor SM feet long and 116 feet wide. The rooms are fragrant with flowers; many chandeliers with brilliant pendants, shed their rays upon the heads of those below, and the walls are covered with silken flags of all nations.

Ten thousand have arrived at 11 o'clock The women, in their rich evening dresses and costly diamonds, the diplomets in their court uniforms and decorations, the resplendent army and many officers, and the civilians in conventional black, constitute a scene that is not likely to be forgotten by any of those

SPACE

THIS

RESERVED

FOR THE

HOME LIFE UTAH

Paid-up Capital,

If you believe in Home Enterprise wait for

THE

HOME

OF UTAH.